Creating a Global Classroom

What is this course about?

This ten-hour course is designed to help individuals facilitate and enhance productivity. In order to become more well-rounded adults and responsible citizens of the world, students must be exposed to perspectives and issues outside their own geopolitical locations. Educators who take this course will discover and choose options to bring the rest of the world into their classrooms by using resources and strategies such as: global education themes, international teachers' organizations, virtual field trips or real-life visits to other countries, and interactive learning approaches to required curriculum subject matter. The minimum time for participant completion of this course includes both enrollment time and system logged in activity time. Enrollment time is a total of one calendar day (1440 minutes) from the moment of enrollment. Activity time includes 100 minutes logged into the system. This 10-hour course uses a combination of both time requirements to maximize participation and allow time for completion of ongoing assignments and assessments. Completion certificates are restricted until both time requirements are accomplished.
